Yarmolinsky Is Named Defense Special Aide

Adam Yarmolinsky, Washington lawyer and one of the "talent scouts" for the incoming administration, today was named a special assistant to the Secretary and Deputy Secretary of Defense.

His first assignment will be to recruit executive personnel for the Defense Department. Then he will carry out special projects for Secretary of Defense McNamara and Deputy Secretary Gilpatric.

Mr. Yarmolinsky is a Harvard graduate and a World War II Air Force veteran. He received his doctor of law degree from Yale Law School in 1948.

He has served as a law clerk to Supreme Court Justice Stanley F. Reed, now retired; practiced law with Cleary, Gottlieb, Friendly & Ball; was director of the Washington office and later secretary of the Fund for the Republic and has served as a lawyer and consultant to philanthropic foundations.

He is the author of "Case Studies in Personnel Security," a compilation of 50 personnel security cases. The study was financed by the Fund for the Republic and was published in 1955.

While the study took no stand for or against the procedures used in security cases, Mr. Yarmolinsky frequently criticized the security system, but said some such program was needed because of the danger of Communist subversion.
